What to expect at the Royal Nutcracker Banquet

After a VIP welcome with Prosecco, you'll feel like Clara entering the fairytale palace as you make your way into the ballroom. You'll find sparkling decor and festive lights, Christmas trees and Nutcracker soldiers everywhere you look.

Then it's time for a mouthwatering 3-course banquet, unlimited drinks and unforgettable entertainment — live Nutcracker ballet performances accompanied by top-class classical musicians.

While some Christmas parties fizzle out after dinner, ours are only just beginning. A live party band takes to the stage, and it's your turn to dance as the music switches from Tchaikovsky to some of the hottest tunes on the planet.

If you can stop dancing, try your luck at the casino tables, or get your face bling on at the glitter bar.

The dress code

This is a black tie event, the best possible excuse to dress up. Having said that, the 'black tie' dress code is not compulsory. We're relaxed about it.

For men, the full 'black tie' look is a tuxedo, dress shirt, black bow tie and shiny patent leather shoes. But if that's not your style, don't worry. A normal suit will be fine.

For women, this is a rare and special opportunity to wear a formal gown — although, again, you don't have to. If a full-length, floor-swishing number isn't your thing, opt for the refined sophistication of a knee-length cocktail dress.

Sample Menu
